Chambers of Commerce Approve Highway Finance Plan

COASTSIDE ROAD ENDORSED AT JOINT MEETING

Directors of Three Cities Give Approval of Present Plan

[illegible]ectors of the Redwood City [illegible]ateo and Burlingame chambers of commerce gave their un[illegible]s approval to the proposed [illegible]or financing the coastside [illegible] connecting San Francis[illegible] Santa Cruz. The directors [illegible]he three chambers of commerce m[illegible]et at the Hotel Benjamin Franklin in San Mateo Wednesday, at which time the matter was thoroughly discussed.

A clear and concise explanation of the conditions under which the road will be constructed was given by County Engineer George A. Kneese of this county. Kneese explained that the road would follow the line of the abandoned Ocean Shore railroad right of way as much as possible and would make use of as much of the grade of the former railroad as possible. This, he said, would be a large saving to the people of the three counties.

The cost of the road would not be heavy on the people of this county, Kneese explained, as the road would take a number of years to build, and the work would only be done as the funds became available for the purpose. The supervisors could not, he said, levy a tax of more than 5 cents on the $100 assessed valuation, but the board could, he said, allot any portion of the money raised by the state's gasoline tax to this project.

The actual cost of the road, Kneese explained, would be less than the estimated cost, as the engineers of the three counties in computing the cost had figured large in order to cover any eventualities which might transpire. The estimate was for a road 73 miles in length and 100 feet wide.

The removal of the Pedro Mountain barrier will increase the assessed valuation of the coastside, Kneese stated, and reduce the burden on the remainder of the county. Also, he explained, the construction of the three-county highway will reduce the cost of maintaining the coastside road now paid for by the county.

Senator M. B. Johnson addressed the meeting. Senator Johnson pointed out to the directors the great advantages mhich this county would receive from the construction of the proposed highway, and predicted that within a few years this highway would be taken into the state's program of highway maintance. The senator said, "San Mateo county cannot afford to block a project of the importance of the coastside high way."

Supervisor Rosalie M. Brown of the second township, also spoke in favor of the proposed road. She said that the board of supervisors of this county would take action on the project at their meeting Monday, and invited representatives of the chambers of commerce to be present at that time. Supervisor Brown also stated that a project is now under way to extend Sloat boulevard and Junipero boulevard to join with the present Alameda de las Pulgas, forming another highway through the length of San Mateo county.

Edward Harrison, vice-president of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce, made a motion that the three chambers represented give their unanimous endorsement to the proposal and that representatives of each be present at the meeting of the supervisors Monday. This was seconded by Edmond Levi, president of the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce, and was passed without a dissenting vote.

The directors of the three chambers of commerce met at the suggestion of the directors of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce, E. B. Hinman, president of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce, acted as chairman. The others rpesent were:

John P. Daley, Leonard Reed, Edmond Levy, Elizabeth Hole, M. B. Johnson, Mrs. Rosalie Brown, C. W. Parsons, Asa Hull, Emil Zweirlein, Seth Cohn, Carl Stoner, Dan Stafford, Charles A. Buck, Edward Harrison, Horace W. Amphlett, Sam Winklebleck, A. W. Matson, E. Donnelly, L. A. Heiner, and Mrs. Amy Holmes.

Aviator Is Speaker At Exchange Club

An interesting talk on trainin students to become aviators and the probable development of aviation was given before the members of the Redwood City Exchange club Tuesday evening. The speaker was Lieutenant Norman Goddard of the Palo Alto School of Aviation. Goddard predicted the passing of aviation fields to serve the large cities, believing that function now served by fields in the outskirts of cities will be filled by large structures built above roofs of the buildings in the center of commercial districts and by roofing over of railroad terminals in the large centers. He further stated that aviation will play a large part in maintaining world peace, in that it brings the nations of the world closer together and they come to know each other better.

Lieutenant Goddard flew yesterday to Fresno and was accompanied on the flight by Kendall Towne, who will attended the state convention of Exchange clubs being held in that city. Dr. W. B. Langston, president and Lindsey Gray, secretary of the Redwood City club, together with Al Davies and Guy R. Kennedy are also in attendance at the convention.

Cuthbertson, to be shown as a part of the coming exhibition at the annual Citizens' Night at Sequoia Uniou High School on May 25th. NEW SCHOOL TO RECEIVE GIFT OF TREE

The presentation of a tree to the recently completed McKinley school will be made tomorrow afternoon by the members of the Redwood City Promotion Association. The tree which will be given to the school is a cedrus atlanticus, and will be presented with a program arranged by the club.

The chairman of the meeting will be Merton Hughes, president of the Promotion Association. Music will be furnished by the Sequoia high school band under the direction of Max Gelber.

Attorney James Davis will make the presentation address, and the tree will be presented by Mrs. Truedell. John W. Poole, president of the board of trustees of the school district, will accept the tree on the part of the board. The presentation will be followed by some remarks by John Gill, district suerintendent, and by the placing of a bronz plaque commemorating the event. The closing prayer will be made by Rev. R. J. Currie.

In commenting upon the disposition shown by various organizations to donate trees to the school, Superintendent Gill said yesterday, "I am more than pleased to see how readily the various organizations of the town have responded to our request for trees. Already a goodly number have been planted on the school grounds and several others are promised. The people of the district have supplied a beautiful school, but the present bare grounds detract from what the architects have built into the building. The trees which are given to the school beautify the place and make a fitting tribute to the pride of the citizens in their school."

Big Vote Given Hoover in County: Smith Leads in Democratic Primary

Notwithstanding that Herbert Hoover was unopposed for the Republican delegates he received a fine complimentary vote in San Mateo county, getting 7755 votes. Al Smith also secured a large vote, 2028. The Republicans cast a 44 per cent vote, while the democrats, who had a keen contest, cast a 54 per cent vote.

The election throughout the county was quiet, nothing occurring to mar the contest. Everything was smooth sailing at the 172 precincts, thanks to the efficiency of County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese, who had delivered the supplies to the polling places the day before. The compiling of the register, which is a trying and provoking task, was done under her supervision so that on election day there was not a single complaint from any of the voters, as their names were properly compiled and placed.

Yesterday afternoon the board of supervisors began to canvass the returns.

All the returns from the various precincts were in yesterday, the last package of ballots arriving from San Gregorio late in the afternoon. The following is a complete unofficial account of the primary election:

Boy Wins Watch as Teachers Knit Brows

Belfast.—A "brain teaser" was put before the pupils of an Enniskillen school by Lord Charlemont, minister of education for Ulster, when he paid them a visit. He asked:

"If a coin were dug up in a garden at Canterbury, which was in the area of the Roman occupation of Britain, with Julius Caesar on it, and dated 'B. C. 43,' would the coin be genuine?"

The masters could not answer it and only one boy could.

Lord Charlemont gave him a silver watch. The boy answered that a man minting a coin 43 years before the birth of Christ could not put the date 43 B. C. on it.

PLEASURE AND WORK

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I HAVE often heard it said of students in college that their instructors were so unreasonable in giving them difficult assignments to study that they had no time for their regular work, meaning, of course, that unless you are bright and quick and know better than the average how to apportion your time, when you have worked up your studies you have no time for pleasures and the extra-curricular work of college.

There are a great many people who are so obsessed with pleasure that they can find no time for work. Pleasure is a good thing, but we are giving more time to it now than we have ever before done.

Out in Fairfield, Iowa, now, if you don't get the family washing on the line before noon, you are likely to run into trouble. If the weekly ironing drags on beyond luncheon time, or whatever they call the meal in the middle of the day in that village, you are likely to have a call from a member of the police force. The sweeping must be done in the morning so that the afternoon may be free for the uninterrupted transmission of whatever is on the air. Afternoons and evenings are reserved for radio owners.

This is what the newspapers said a few weeks ago:

"The new ordinance, forbidding the use of electrical appliances which interfere with radio sets between noon and midnight, went into effect today and owners of receiving sets, with the town officials, are keeping vigilant ears tuned for the first unnecessary and unlawful interference with their daily programs.

"Now operators of violet-ray machines, housewives with washing machines or vacuum cleaners which produce static in neighbors' loud speakers—owners of any electrical appliance which interferes with radio receptions—must finish their work before noon or be subject to a maximum penalty of $100 fine or thirty days in jail.

"As the only exception, physicians will be allowed to use X-ray machines in case of emergency."

There is a certain satisfaction in knowing that physicians may still pursue electrical practices during the afternoons even though it does interfere somewhat with the pleasure of the radio fan. When I was a boy and lived in the country it was not customary for anyone to get sick excepting at night when the regular work of the day was over. All sensible people, in recent years, have learned that they receive more sympathetic attention if they confine their serious illnesses to daylight hours. It would congest matters unreasonably if one could receive treatment only in the morning. Possibly it may come to that later as the thirst for pleasure grows more intense.

On Prince Edward's island until very recent years automobiles were kept off the public thoroughfares on Sundays and market days in order that they might not interfere with the religious and business interests of those who were driving horses into town. This was the inhibition of pleasure in order that business and spiritual matters might not be interfered with. We are coming to the point, I am afraid, however, where if work interferes with pleasure it will have to step aside.

DOTS HIGH IN FAVOR

Polka dots are in vogu again. Paris takes this printed fabric and uses it to fashion, trim and line the very newest of this season's clothes.

An interesting treatment of the polka dot silk is shown in this frock of black chiffon which Dorothy Sebastian wears in "Dancing Girls."

Tiers on the skirt and the intriguing sleeves are fashioned of the polka dot taffeta, which is dotted with yellow, green and red.

Black satin slippers and a black felt toque complete the costume.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Stars in Daytime

The stars are shining all day long just as they do at night and the reason we do not see them is because the sun is so much closer that we are dazzled by its brightness. During a total eclipse of the sun the stars are visible to the earth even though it is midday.

"Stream Line" Effect for Shoes Predicted

Lynn, Mass.—Indian prints and block-printed lines will predominate in the fabrics, while soft, rich hues of blue, green, maize, beige, Indian yellows, jade and some shades of red will meet milady's shoe style requirements this summer. This is the advance information that comes from designers at the shoe factories here.

Imitation reptile shoes are believed to be on the wane, but the manufacturers are anticipating an increased demand for the real things in snake and lizard skin shoes. White shoes will be in greater demand this summer than for many seasons past, they believe.

The smartest shoes will have French lines, short foreparts and high arches for dress wear, but the sports shoes will be distinctly American, with stream lines suggesting automobiles or angular wing effects, revealing the "airplane influence."

Five of Britain's World War Generals Are Dead

London.—Of twenty famous British generals who served in the World war, five have passed into the land where wars are unknown. The last to join the sleeping warriors was Earl Haig, and those who preceded him to the grave were the earl of Ypres (formerly Viscount French), Lord Rawlinson, Sir Stanley Maude and Sir John Cowans. Those left to carry on in peace as they did in war are Lord Byng, Lord Plumer, Lord Horne, the earl of Cavan, Sir W. Robertson, Viscount Allenby, Sir H. H. Wilson, Sir William Birdwood, the Rt. Hon. J. C. Smuts, Sir H. T. Lukin, Sir J. Monash, Sir G. F. Milne, Sir A. H. Russell, Sir W. R. Marshall and Sir A. W. Currie.

Fake "Noble" Exposed

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Patrick F. O'Brien, whose home is supposed to be in Momence, Ill., and who posed in northeastern South Dakota as an Irish nobleman, has been given his "walking papers" by Hans Hanson, state's attorney of Clark county, S. D., who ironically said: "I hope he is going yet."

The fake Irish nobleman recently appeared in South Dakota, and the first project he said he was interested in was the erection of a clubhouse for the Codington county post of the American Legion at a cost of $25,000, which he would pay himself as soon as he "got returns" from his alleged Irish estate.

O'Brien by his own admission is a connoisseur of art, literature, fraternalism and modern warfare. He claimed to have served with the American expeditionary forces in France, but South Dakota Legion men obtained evidence that this claim was false. He also said he had had several German bullets removed from his anatomy at Rochester, Minn., under direction of the veterans' bureau. A letter to Rochester failed to bear this out.

The "Irish nobleman," during the few strenuous days he spent in South Dakota, purchased several automobiles for future delivery, as well as radios and other objects. He delayed the payment of board bills so cleverly that landlords and landladies felt ashamed to press him.

Finally, when confronted by State's Attorney Hanson, he made a written confession that he was an impostor and had no money, and was given a brief time to leave South Dakota. He accepted the invitation.

Good Salvage Work

London.—Salvage work said to be unique in engineering history is being carried on at Scapa Flow by Cox & Shanke, who, having already raised 26 destroyers of the German fleet, are now engaged in the gigantic task of floating the battleship Seydlitz.

The Seydlitz lay upon her side. To turn her over and raise her upright it has been estimated would have cost more than $300,000—too much to show a profit on the transaction. The salvage engineers, therefore, have worked out a plan to float the huge ship, weighing 25,000 tons and having a length of 656 feet, on her side and to tow her in this position to the breaking-up depot six miles away. She lay at a depth of more than eighty feet. Mr. Cox, describing the method of operation, said:

"We work by pumping compressed air into the ship and at the same time filling up with concrete one by one the openings through which the air escapes. The biggest opening we have filled so far measures 44 by 6 feet, and required ten tons of concrete."

The raising of the whole German fleet, he said, would "probably be more than a life's work for most of us now engaged on it."

London to Exhibit 7,000-Year-Old Letter

London.—A letter which is said to be the oldest in the world is to be shown at an exhibition of antiques to be held in the Grafton galleries, London, soon. It is written in cuneiform characters on fired clay, and when found at Ur was inclosed in a clay envelope. The writer lived in the dynasty of Larza, of Babylon, 5,000 years before the Christian era. The letter refers to a deed of purchase or hire of a field by one Annini from Simti-Ha.

Jail Too Noisy

Visalia, Calif.—A temporary injunction to restrain prisoners in the county jail here from singing and "making offer noises" at night is asked in a suit filed against the county by Clara Johnston and Robert Johnston, who live near the jail.

London Roman City

London.—The historical dictum that London was a prehistoric Celtic city has just been shattered here by Dr. Mortimer Wheeler, keeper of the London museum; who has expressed the opinion that London was the creation of the Roman invaders.

Considerable interest has been aroused by this finding, particularly in view of the fact that the historical monuments commission is shortly to publish a report on Roman London, in which considerable new evidence in support of the theory will be brought forth.

Doctor Wheeler argues that there is no historical evidence of a prehistoric London and that the fact that London is a Celtic name carries no particular significance since the Romans, as the modern colonizing British, often adopted the native names for their settlements.

Parasite of London Bridge.

The absence of an early settlement in such an important position is explained by the historian with the fact that the population of England in the hunting stage of civilization was very small and about five-tenths of the country was covered by dense oak forests, which were practically impenetrable. These forest areas of the Thames valley would thus be avoided, while the open gravel area in the vicinity now London was undesirable due to the great breadth and extreme turbulence of the river at that point.

As for the city of London itself Doctor Wheeler is of the opinion that it is a "parasite of London bridge." This, he explained, is a logical deduction from the fact that the original bridge came into existence when overseas trade began to be a dominating factor in the economic life of southeastern England, for which it constituted a link in one of the main arteries.

These trade conditions, according to the historian, came into existence at the time of the Roman occupation, or about the year 43 A. D., the year of the Roman conquest. Roman London, in all likelihood, he declares, was a bridgehead settlement.

Seek More Evidence.

The Roman wall, according to Doctor Wheeler, was built much earlier than the Third or Fourth century, as generally believed. He declares there is reason to believe that it was built as early as the First century following the destruction of the Roman town by Bordicea. He points out that there is much evidence that large and ambitious works of that kind belong to the early period of success and ambition, while the small walled towns are more typical of the period during which the Roman cities were erecting defenses against the barbarian invaders.

Doctor Wheeler has made a plea for the appointment of a trained official to watch the building excavations in the area of Roman London, declaring that invaluable discoveries were being lost as the result of modern London driving its foundations straight through the Roman level.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

I. Zellerbach, president of the California Fish and Game Commission, will present California's problems and accomplishments in conservation of outdoor life at the annual convention of the Izaak Walton League of America in Omaha April 20, it has been announced at Sacramento by Jacob M. Dickinson, president of the organization.

Either Californians are drinking more intoxicating liquor than at any time since prohibition or the quality of "speak easy" beverages is constantly getting poorer. Whichever it is, 190 California residents died of acute alcoholism during the last year, according to reports thus far received by the department of public health, as compared with only 37 in 1920, the first year of prohibition. And the bootleggers' death toll from 1920 to 1927, inclusive is 1006.

The state railroad commission last week refused to reconsider its recent action in fixing the local rates of the Pacific Electric Company in Los Angeles. The city had asked for a rehearing of the commission's actions. The commission also denied the railway company's petition for a rehearing of its application for an increase of from 5 to 7 cents in its local fares. As a resutl of the commission's action the new rates went into effect April 27th. Denial of the city's petition removes the last obstacle.

Dates and itinerary of the thirty-ninth annual excursion of the California Press Association were announced a few days ago by Friend W. Richardson, president, and Oran A. King, secretary. The jaunt this year will indulge in visits to Crater Lake, Rogue River Valley and Klamath Falls, Oregon. The excursionists will leave San Francisco Sunday, June 24, in special Pullmans, on the Southern Pacific.

Now that the rainy season is nearly over in California and the season of the forest fire is about to begin the National Automobile Club has sent out a warning to its more than 511,800 members that care must be taken to prevent fires when entering any of the United States forests in the state. In a bulletin issued by the club it is pointed out that most of the forest fires in the state are caused by either the careless camper or the equally careless smoker. The club members are cautioned to remember that heavy penalties are imposed by the courts for infractions of rules governing camping and motoring in the national forests.

Within the next few weeks California will be in the midst of her greatest road-building era. In addition to several hundreds of thousands of dollars of work which is now actually under contract, other highway projects to cost $5,470,1100 are now being prepared for competitive bidding or will soon be let. Contracts for $11,349,000 in work are now pending. Bids upon these projects have been opened and contract awards are expected to be made within the next few days. In addition, work now advertised stands in the amount of $972,100. Plans and specifications have been prepared upon $442,000 in other work and will be ready for contractors' bids within the next couple of weeks.

California's "hesitation" marriage law is a thorn in the side of both Cupid and the county treasuers. Drawing this conclusion about the statute, Assemblyman A. J. Murphy, repesnting Del Norte and Siskiyou counties, declared last week that he will work for its repeal in the legislature this winter. "The three day wait before issuance of a marriage license is reducing the number of marriages all over California," Murphy asserted. "Couples are eloping to adjoining states to be married and California county governments are losing the license fees. With Oregon only a few miles away, this is particularly true of our northern cities."

An increase of $35,019,903 in the bonded indebtedness of California and its cities and counties during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, was reported last week by State Controller Ray L. Riley. The total indebtedness of the three governmental divisions was $711,186,104.09, compared with $672,166,200.22 the preceding year. More than $20,000,000 of the increase was recorded by cities, $14,171,010 by the counties and only $4,458,000 by the state. The city bonded debt total last year stood at $329,844,041.04, as against $309,453,146.44 the preceding year. The county total was $276,533,563, as compared with $262,362,553 a year earlier, while the state total jumped from $100,350,500 to $104,808,500. Receipts from taxes increased 342, per cent during the period since 1911, with receipts from licenses increasing only 92 per cent.

Ten thousand dollars and no place to spend it—a patent shaving set and no reason for a shave. Such is the fix of a California convict now working in a highway camp on the Weaverville lateral. The money is said to have been paid over to the State Prison Board for safe-keeping—to see that the convict doesn't spend it foolishly—and out in the big world machines are turning out his invention. It is said to be a patent brush which will overcome the difficulties of a dull razor blade and enable a man with a stiff beard to get to the office on time in the morning.

California has 1,849,979 voters qualified to participate in the May 1 presidential primary election, an increase of 350,384 over registration for the last presidential primary in 1924. Statewide registration figures, setting a new presidential primary record, were made public a few days ago by Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan, who predicted that by the November general election the number of qualified voters will total approximately 2,250,000. The Republican registration totals 1,254,5154 for the primary, a gain of 241,813 over G. O. P. strength in 1924.

Now, Let's Finish the Job

THE SPLENDID vote given Herbert Hoover by the electors of California last Tuesday demonstrates his popularity in the state. The big support he received in every section will have a psychological effect upon the eastern voter, particularly the states that are about to have presidential primaries. It will show that California is behind the secretary of commerce to a man for the presidency and will use every effort to place him in the White House.

Our efforts and support should not cease now that he has the California delegation safe in the proper column but we should continue the good work in writing to friends beyond the Rockies urging them to support Hoover. Our real work begins now.

It is beginning to look as though Mr. Hoover would receive the Republican nomination at the Kansas City convention on the first ballot. His lead is so great that it can be hardly overcome by any of his opponents. Only by a miracle can he be defeated. His many friends throughout the nation predict his nomination—and that means his election.

The splendid vote given Hoover in San Mateo county Tuesday was praiseworthy. It was the banner county of the state, having accorded him the largest vote, in proportion to its registration, of any county in California. This is as it should be. This community has been his boyhood home, the people know and love him and are confident, that if elected, he will become one of the great presidents of the country. He has the ability, experience; he is fearless, and above and beyond all he is honest and trustworthy. These qualifications should and will make him a successful president, one that California will be proud of and a president that the people of the country will exult over and applaud California for having given to the nation.

The People Own America

"THE PEOPLE of the last 20 years have been industriously swallowing the corporations," declares a well-known industrial economist. "Step by step the public—the common people to whom so much oration has been devoted—has taken over ownership of the corporations, until today we have a new social structure.

"Are we not building up a 'new socialism,' the ownership by the many of our great producing and service agencies? And basing that new socialism on the sound foundation of capitalism and private initiative, we have 20,000,000 investors to show how great is our democracy of business.

"Three great forces have helped to bring about this new democracy of the corporation, to keep business in a straight path even if it were inclined to step aside.

"One is mass ownership; another is the need of public good will, which mass production intensifies; the third is the interdependence of business on business, so that reputation for fair dealing and honesty is of prime importance.

"Under corporate forms the opportunity was opened for the people of the nation to make a 'social recapture of the tools of production.' The workers own the tools of production today.

"The public knows that it—the public—is the real owner of America!"

False Economy in Building Construction

FALSE ECONOMY in building homes, office buildings, stores and factories often leads to useless fire waste. A few more dollars invested in better building methods ,would often check the spread of flames, making it possible to keep a fire under control until the fire department arrived.

"When a man is building a home and the architect draws his plans according to all the standards of fire protection, should the owner wish to reduce the cost as shown by the estimate, the first things to be eliminated are too often the factors of safety," says Warren Ellis of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. "A cedar-lined closet seems far more important than the fact that their stairway is unenclosed, that fire stops within the walls have been eliminated or that their chimney has a flue which is not absolutely safe. If it means elimination of a breakfast nook to get a fire-resistive roof, they much prefer to get along without the safe roof. This is false economy.

"False economy is a habit of the American people when it comes to constructing fire-resistive buildings and a campaign against this attitude should show results in the first generation. We can just as readily acquire the habit of desiring fire-safe buildings as of being willing to take chances."

PRUNING TIME

LEGAL QUESTIONS FACE CANDIDATES

Legislators' Election Is Clouded in Confusion

By ESTO BROUGHTON
Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, May 3 — The "where" and the "how" of running for the legislature in California this season is not so simple.

In fact, it almost requires a Philadelphia lawyer to say 'where' For until the question of the referendum of the "farm bloc" reopportionment is settled by the State Supreme Court, Mr. Legislator doesn't know whether he will gambol politically in the green pastures of the "cow" counties or on hard city pavements.

And the intricacies of runnin, under the new "sponsor" ac which takes the place of the old direct primary petition are now being explained by Charles Hagerty, election statistician in th secretary of state's office.

A longer if not a harder race the political and business "low which moves up the starting date nearly a month earlier. Sponsor petitions, vouching for the "mental, mora and physical "qaulifications for office of each candidate, must be filed between May 30 and June 23 of each year for the offices of assemblyman, state and United States senator, congressman and any county office becoming vacant, according to Hagarty.

State legislators need from 20 to 30 friends, tried and true, to "sponsor" them, while congressmen must have from 40 to 60 United States senators from 65 to 100.

The economy of the candidate effected by eliminating the circulation of a long nominating petition is particularly offset by the raise of the filing fees, the initial ante for assemblyman being doubled and the others higher in proportion.

But in return for this, the secretary of state must send out a pamphlet to each voter, giving the political and usiness "low down" on the candidate, just as he and his friends gave it.

With all the pride of authorship and the backing of the California Farm Bureau Federation, Senator Frank S. Boggs of Stockton is still waging a legal war to prevent the referending of the Boggs Reapportionment Act giving the "farm bloc" control of the senate.

Briefs have been filed on both sides of the legal tangle, and the Supreme Court must make up its judicial mind before May 30, if the referendum petitions are valid or not, so that the legal tracks may be cleared for the August primary.

If the "cow" county contention is upheld that the petitions are defective and the signatures fraudulent, then the law laying out new legislarive districts becomes effective immediately.

This would mean that San Francisco, Los Angeles and Alameda counties with a representation of 19 state senators would lose all but three of them, and the 16 extras with the addition of one from Santa Clara county would be distributed among the rural counties. No county would have more than one senator and not more than three counties would be grouped in any one senatorial district.

Among the counties to gain a whole interest in a senator under the Boggs Act are: Butte, Marin, Solano, Orange, Stanislaus, San Mateo and San Joaquin; while San Diego and Fresno retain their single senators, and Santa Clara is reduced from two to one representative in the upper house.

Among the two-county groups for senatorial purposes are De Norte and Siskiyou forming the second district; Merced and Madera the twenty-fourth; and Sutter and Yolo, combined to form the tenth district.

Under the three-county groups in the farm reapportionment act, Modoc, Lassen and Plumas constitute the first senatorial; while Tehama, Glenn and Colusa are identified together for the eighth and Sierra and Nevada and Placer counties for the seventh district.

I case the judicial ruling is contra to Senator Boggs' contention and the referendum petitions held valid, then the reapportionment question must go to a vote in Novemer and the August election will be held according to the old legislative districts, Hagerty declared.

State Detective Bureau Is Warden's Suggestion

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, May 3 — A governmental "Sherlock Holmes" equiped to unravel mystery crimes and run down desperate criminals may soon be held in readiness to help out small town police officers when serious crimes are committed in outlying communities.

Not one, out a whole corps of expert detectives would be maintained by the state, according to a suggestion made by James A. Johnston, former warden of San Quentin, before the State Crime Commission.

Johnston, who is chairman of the crime body, said expert state criminologists probably would be able to bring many criminals to justice who otherwise would escape.

OVEREATING MENACE TO LONG LIFE

OVEREATING
By L. H. Newburgh, M. D.
Ann Arbor, Mich.
Professor of Clinical Investigation
Michigan University

From the earliest of times man has believed that an abundance of food caused increased vigor. This is one of those comfortable doctrines that justify the unrestrained gratification of the appetite as a means of strengthening the body. Closely associated with this idea is the widespread conviction that eating meat strengthens the muscles and that the hardworking man needs much meat. With the progressive increase of wealth in the United States more and more of our people have been financially able to adopt a habit which has made us an overfed nation.

But recent studies from many parts of the world have shown that an excess of food does not improve health but is, on the contrary, the cause of a number of serious illnesses. Persons who eat more than they actually need grow fat and fatter. Obesity, in addition to being a great hindrance to the free movements of the body, very stealthily produces changes in our organs which eventually makes themselves known in the form of diabetes, heart disease, hardening of the arteries, or apoplexy. The insurance companies are pointing out that people who are overweight die at an earlier age than those of normal weight and that for every ten pounds excess weight there is a definite lessening of the chance of reaching old age.

Many persons who do not seriously overeat in a general way, take too much animal fat such as meat, eggs and fish. The very thorough researches of Dr. Hindhede, food commissioner of Denmark, show that such persons are in great danger of dying of kidney disease, liver disease, or apoplexy in the prime of life. Many others suffer from indigestion for many years.

Several laboratories in this country have been observing the effect of diets rich in animal food (protein) on rats. It is very clear that such foods causes serious kidney and liver disease in these animals.

Everyone should now accept the fact that evereating is one of the most important causes of chronic fatal disease in persons between the ages of forty and sixty years.

"Booze" Map Is Latest Discovery

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, May 3 — Meteoroligical maps may show th wet and dry spots, atmospherically speaking, but a "booze" map showing the "wet" spots where liquor may be purchased wholesale is the latest find of Sheriff C W. Toland of Butte couny .

The map disclosed numerous wholesale liquor depots on both sides of the Sacramento river, and was found by the Butte county officer when he searched B. F. Barfield and Sam Grant of Chico, who were arrested on a liquor charge.

Teachers' Tenure Hit by Referendum

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, May 3 — Plans to initiate a referendum vote against the State Teachers' Tenure Act, set in motion in Colusa county by a "committee of one hundred school trustees who resent the cramping of their "style" in the hiring and firing of school teachers, were reported today.

At a mass meeting the trustees denounced the act as "unwarranted protection for the unfit and unnecessary for the good teacher."

CLEAR tinkling ICE
in Crystal Goblets

The ice which your ice man delivers is always free from impurities. It is always clear and transparent. There is never that unappetizing, cloudy, milky appearance.

Crack it into small pieces to go with olives or celery. Crush it to surround oyster, crab or lobster cocktails. Splinter it with an ice pick into tinkling crystals for the water goblets and iced drinks. Keep it in your refrigerator the year around. There are few things you can buy which provide so many benefits, at so small a cost.

Ice extends the season for fresh fruits and vegetables. It keeps milk wholesome, butter sweet, meats fresh. It enhances the flavor and appetizing qualities of almost every food. It adds attractiveness to your table. It safeguards health.

The cost of ice is less than ten cents a day. There is nothing to get out of order or wear out. In food saved, in flavor enhanced, in health value, a well-iced refrigerator pays for itself.

Your Ice Man Sells Refrigerators

Your ice company are specialists in household refrigeration. They will either recommend a good refrigerator for you, or sell you one at the best price, and easy terms. Just ask your ice man about it.

PLANS FOR GRADUATION TAKE SHAPE AT SEQUOIA

After a long discussion, the main speaker of the evening at the commencement exercises for Sequoia Union High School has finally been settled, by asking T. W. McQuarrie, president of the San Jose State Teachers' College, to deliver the commencement address.

The entire program of the evening has not yet been settled, but it will probably follow the same plan as it has in the previous years according to Miss Mary Cowden, senior class advisor.

After a wait of about three weeks, the graduation announcements have arrived. The order this year was one of the largest ever sent out by any graduating class in the history of the high school. The total number of announcements was 2375.

The high school will graduate 133 students this year.

Town Wins Suit On Zoning Law

A decision handed down this week by the California Supreme Court confirms that of Judge Geo. H. Buck in the matter of the Town of Redwood City against E. W. Magruder. The decision of the Supreme Court as well as that of Judge Buck upholds the legality of the Redwood City zoning ordinance.

The action of the city against the local real estate and lumber man was the result of the maintenance of a lumber yard by Magruder in a district designated as residential in the city's zoning ordinance.

Good Crops Seen For State Farmers

By Capitol News Bureau

If the farmer usually has something of which to complain, still he keeps on planting crops, Federal-State Statistician E. E. Kaufman commented today in calling attention to the fact that California has larger acreages in truck crops as well as in most other agricultural products than it had a year ago. Cantaloupe plantings especially in the San Joaquin Valley have increased 15 percent; the potato acreage has increased; most districts have added heavily to acreages in early crops such as lettuce, cauliflower and carrots, and there is indication for a heavy planting of tomatoes. Crop conditions, except in a few localities are unusually good, Kaufman said.

Moisture Necessary To Proper Refrigeration

Maintenance of atmospheric balance in the home refrigerator is of vital importance if perishable foods are to be kept in perfect condition, it is revealed in a scientific study of the subject.

Experiments showed that cold alone is not enough and that air may be chilled to a temperature so dry that it absorbs the moisture in the foods, drying out fresh meats and causing green beans, lettuce, carrots or spinach to lose much of their crispness and flavor.

As the tests proved that some moisture is absolutely necessary to keep perishable foods in perfect condition, it was pointed out that melting ice is ideal for this purpose. It seems that the air current is passing over the block of ice gains just enough moisture from the wet film on the ice, and yet, the temperature is kept low enough to prevent mold on delicate berries and soft foods. Following are the conclusions reached in the study:

"A properly built and well-iced refrigerator can be depended upon to maintain balanced atmospheric conditions. The air will be cold enough to arrest the bacteria which cause spoilage, and prevent their development. The air also will be dry enough to prevent mold. In addition, it will be moist enough to prevent food from drying out and losing its freshness and flavor. Air must be more than merely cold, if good refrigeration is to be the result.

"Refrigeration by means of melting ice automatically regulates the temperature inside the ice-box. Temperature is reduced because the ice-cake absorbs heat as it melts. In cold weather, it melts, slowly, faster as the temperature rises. Ice in a refrigerator keeps food in perfect condition by surrounting it with a circulating current of moist, chilled air. This current passes over the iceblock, sinks into the chamber beneath the ice, and then rises through the food-laden shelves before returning to the ice. The film of water on the ice absorbs the odors and carries them down the drain. Then the purified, chilled air repeats its journey."

Chief Mark Ryan of the Redwood City fire department left last week for Washington and Oregon in connection with his work as president of the Pacific Coast Fire Chiefs' Association. His schedule included meetings in Portland and Medford, Oregon; Seattle and Vancouver, Washington; and Berkeley and Dunsmuir, California. He returned Tuesday.

W. L. GLASCOCK LEAVES SCHOOL

Resignation of San Mateo Principal Accepted by Board

After serving as principal of the San Mateo high school for fifteen years, W. L. Glascock this week severed his connections with that institution. Glascock's resignation was tendered several months ago following the announcement of a serious financial condition which existed in the school. The resignation was to take effect as soon as a successor was appointed.

The board has not yet appointed a successor to Glascock, but is leaving that duty to the new board which will take office tomorrow. In the meantime Glascock has been assisting in an audit of the accounts of the books of the school being conducted by S. E. Piatt. Glascock informed the board that his work in this matter had been completed and asked that he be relieved of further duties in the school. This request was granted.

Change in Shape of Plates Planned

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, May 3 — A wider, shorter license plate bearing serial letters and comparatively few numbers will supplant the present style of numerical identification on automobiles registered in California next year, according to plans revealed by Frank G. Snook, chief of the motor vehicle division.

The present plates, Snook believes, are hard to read, made of inferior materials and are not always of happy color combinations.

Millbrae Airport Shows Big Business Increase

Overwhelming evidence of the giant strides made by the air transportation industry in the past year is revealed in the first annual business report of Mills Field, San Francisco's municipal airport at Millbrae, just released here. It covers the twelve months of operation since the airport opened in May, 1927.

A total of 8,077 flights and landings, with 12,350 passengers, in planes of every type that arrived from and left for all parts of the world, is shown in the official compilation of the city's airport committee, composed of San Francisco Supervisors Milo F. Kent, Andrew J. Gallagher and Frank J. McGovern.

There were 1946 flights and landings during April, with 3272 passengers, the biggest month of the year. During the five days of the Western Aircraft Show at Mills Field, from April 11 to 15, there were 796 flights and landings, with 1489 passengers. Even deducting those five days, the April business showed a great gain over March.

Mills Field, recognized as "America's Model Airport," is now taxed to its capacity with business despite the fact that expansion of equipment has continued regularly since the airport was established

California Leads Nation In Fish Production

It may sound "fishy" but California again led all States of the Union last year in production of fish, taking 389,253,570 pounds worth $25,000,000 from waters of the Pacific and its tributary streams. Three-fourths of this enormous catch was canned or cured.

The oily sardine led the commercial pack, 298,97,572 pounds being taken, while skipjacks ranked second with a catch of 14,262,897 pounds and the soulful sole was the "sole" contender for third honors with 9,222,798 pounds netted.

Albacore proved so dextrous in avoiding nets that but 2,000,000 pounds were taken, one-ninth of the normal catch.

The General delights to be on the big domain watching his herds grazing on the mountain side and enjoying the sheep gamboling in the valley. As a young officer he was stationed in Montana for several years spending the happiest moments in the wilds of that country. He loves to spend his summers there. The Devol home on Santa Cruz avenue will be leased during the owner's absence.

Monastery to be Dedicated in Aug.

The Corpus Christi Monastery will be dedicated about the first week in August with elaborate ceremony, bringing many noted clergymen here from all portions of the diocese. The good sisters are looking forward with pleasant anticipation to this event. It is planned to hold a bazaar about that time to continue for a week. The cloister is dependent upon its own energies and work for sustenance. The sisters make rosary beeds, scapulars and fancy work of all kinds which may be bought at a small cost at the Monastery. The public chapel is open at all times to worshippers. Vespers take place every afternoon at a quarter to five, followed by benediction at a quarter past five. Many attend these devotions, several coming from San Mateo and Hillsborough to be present at the Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament. The attendance is growing daily and it is only a short time when pilgrimages of holy people from all parts of the peninsula will be made their every afternoon.

A Sense of Humor

All those seeking positions under the new council showed a good sense of humor in their applications to the board of trustees of Menlo Park. One young man seeking the position of policeman declared he was six feet in height, weighed 200 pounds, was married and the proud father of a girl. These were his only qualifications. Tough on the wife and daughter. An aplicant for city judge said he was experienced in the real estate and insurance business. He hadn't even a passing acquaintance with Blackstone. The only qualification an applicant for poundmaster had was that he could sell all stray dogs for $2.50 each to Redwood City butchers. Hot dog.

City Council

The city council met Wednesday night with every member in his seat. Many believing there was going to be a pyrothecnic display crowded the hall to witness the fun, but in this they were disappointed for the proceedings of the meeting went on without a ripple. The council filled all vacancies in municipal offices without delay.

Nominations being declared in order by the mayor, Ellis named Thomas Furman for chief of police and Blake seconded it, and Furman was declared the unanimous choice of the council. E. P. Clough, the contractor, was named by W. E. Dale for city judge and this was seconded by Alexander Walker and Clough was chosen without opposition. George A. Kneese was chosen city engineer on motion of Blake and seconded by W. E. Dale. Attorney George K. A communication was read from A. E. Anthony, representing the Southern Pacific Company, saying that the company planned to discontinue the flag man at the Oak Grove crossing, using the wig-wag instead and asked for the approval of the council. The letter was filed for urther consideration.

Walker, the building inspector, reported the contractor putting down the sewer on Oak Grove avenue had left the street in good condition. He also reported that a building was being constructed on the main street for which a permit was not issued. He was given time to make a further report. In the mean time the owner must present the council with plans and specifications.

Widening the Telephone Horizon

IN the memory of many now living, Alexander Graham Bell predicted that the day would come when we could talk to other countries, even across wide expanses of water.

Bell's vision was made a reality when in 1926 New York and London spoke together in two way conversation. Since then, this service has been opened to the public between any point in the U.S.A. and Great Britain. Mexico has been brought into speaking distance. Important cities of continental Europe have come within our voice horizon.

Even more important, the Bell System in the United States now embraces 18,500,000 telephones—a growth for the past year of more than 750,000.

This is measurable progress in widening America's telephone horizon.

FIERCE FIGHT FIGURED FOR LEGISLATORS

Several Issues Will Result in Hot Debates

Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, May 4—"Rushing the season," a privilege traditionally reserved for vivacious ladies of the vogue, is fast becoming a habit of California lawmakers.

Governor Young is partly to blame for the early avalanche of legislation, for the governor, sometime hence, let it be known that he wanted "fewer and better laws, earlier."

The virtue of the plan, Governor Young insists, is that state officials, the solons themselves and the general public will have a greater opportunity to weigh proposed statutes in the balance before reaching a conclusion as to their desirability.

Regardless of the cause, the effect as evidenced to date is that the legislative grist miss is fairly well provided with fodder. And the opening date of the 1929 legislative session is still some eight months distant.

The fat is on the fire, it seems, for there are well-founded reports that the men who have much to do with butter-fat are going to make another assault on the oleomargarine industry. Either the original "oleo" tax, a levy of 2 cents per pound on all butter substitutes, will be re-introduced, or some other modified act will be submitted.

While the oleomargarine tax probably will be backed by dairy interests, to date there has been no indication as to who will introduce the measure. A similar proposal was defeated at the polls two years ago.

Another big battle, also a repeater, promises to center around a move to re-legalize hydraulic mining. Assemblyman Dan Williams of Chinese Camp is considering the introduction of this bill, which means that the men of the hill and the tillers of the soil will mix in a vigorous free-for-all. The hydraulic mining men claim they will have greater support than two years ago and have hopes of actually putting the bill through.

The battle royal of the early part of the session, before the major issues reach the voting stage, is expected to be participated by a determined drive to repeal California's three-day hesitation marriage act, sometimes known as the "gin-marriage" law.

Passed when the legislators were in a serious comic frame of mind, say its opponents, the new matrimony law has given Reno a new business to augment her divorce industry, but has created havoc in the California matrimonial market.

Proponents of the bill say it halts many "child marriages" and causes other couples to "stop, look and listen" before they take the plunge. Those opposed argue, however, that Reno's marriage rate has shot up in direct proportion to the California decrease, and that the only result has been loss of business to California hotel men, resort proprietors, jewelers, clergymen, et al., not to mention the trouble occasioned Romeos and Juliets who wish to get married without benefit of publicity.

Assemblyman J. J. Murphy of Weed has taken up the cudgel against the marriage bill, along with Assemblyman H. F. Dillinger of Placerville.

Ladies' Gymn Club Plans Sport Dance

The success which met the efforts of the ladies of the Sequoia Recreational Club, the evening gymnasium class, at their first dance some months ago has induced in the announcement of a second dance to be given in the gymnasium of the high school on Saturday evening, May 19. The second dance will be a sports dance and anything suggestive of sports attire will be in order. Admission will be by invitation from members of the club.

Plans have been made for a repetition of the pleasant affair which the last dance proved to be. O'Connor's orchestra has been secured to furnish music for the event.

Promotion Association Hears Planning Talk

The regular weekly meeting of the Redwood City Promotion Association which was held Wednesday night at the Intermediate school on Broadway, was well attended. Several new projects for the benefit of Redwood City were discussed. E. B. Hinman, president of the chamber of commerce, gave a very interesting talk in reference to the planning commission of the city. The members were all enthused over a whist party which is to take place on Saturday, May 12th for which many prizes have already been donated.

All members are requested to meet at the McKinley school on Duane street for the dedication of a tree Saturday, May 5th, at 2 p. m. sharp.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

RESOLUTION OF INTENTION No. 10.

RESOLVED: That it is the intention of the Town Council of the Town of Atherton to order the following work to be done and improvement to be made in said town, to-wit:

Section 1. The Colfax Bookplate

By Agnes Miller

W.N.U. SERVICE.

SYNOPSIS

On a certain momentous Monday morning Miss Constance Fuller, cataloguer and seller of rare books at Darrow's New and Second-Hand Bookshop, New York, notices that the first customer is a dignified, white-bearded old gentleman, who saunters into the alcove placarded "Medical Works." Peter Burton, one of the employees, amazes Constance by telling her he paid $510 at auction for an old law book containing a Colfax bookplate. Suddenly a girl's shriek of "Murder!" rings out in the store. The elderly customer is on the floor unconscious, with his right wrist slashed. Just before the shrieking girl falls in a faint, she calls out to Peter, whom she seems to recognize as the man who bought the rare book in Richmond, Va., a few days before: "Keep it! Keep it for me!" Peter's sister, Nancy, began that morning working at Darrow's. Nancy tells Constance of her elopement with Brandon Tower, a shorthand teacher, an elopement which was cut short when Tower attempted to make off with Nancy's suitcase. As Nancy and Peter have left home because their father has just married a hateful woman, they rent the third-floor apartment Sansoni has vacant above his restaurant. Constance explains Darrow's card-index system to Captain Ashland of England, a nephew of Mr. Darrow's.

It was a most interesting bookplate, skillfully drawn, of charming design, full of tantalizing clews to whet one's curiosity as to who had been the long-departed owner, what the story of a life that in some way had combined science with adventure, a century or more ago. Yet, ten seconds after my eyes had rested on it, I was filled with consternation. I felt my face turning cold; was it from the chill of regretful disappointment that began to emanate from Captain Ashland, as he, too, gazed at the bookplate in silence? Finally I stole one glance at him, praying that my judgment might have made an error, however awful, after all. But he shook his head, slowly yet decidedly; and then confirmed my fears with the authoritative verdict:

"It's a forgery!"

I knew it. Every sign pointed to it. And chagrin overwhelmed me. The captain, while disappointed, was philosophical.

"It's sad to have high hopes dashed," he remarked; "but this paper's modern, its color's wrong, the design's not really characteristic of Colfax' style, and—I say! This really is a drawing, not an impression from a plate. By Jove, though, it's clever! I hardly wonder the buyer was deceived."

"Especially as he's just beginning to have enough experience for such work," said I, quickly; "and one way, at least, no harm has been done. Mr. Burton hasn't said anything official about his 'find.' I'm the only person here to whom he mentioned it. He knew I'd be interested, on account of my special work."

"Quite so," assented the captain, with discreet understanding; "but won't the poor chap be no end surprised when you tell him the truth!"

I was plunged into gloom by the prospect. A moment of silence was shattered by the clatter of the descending elevator, wherein, as it hung a moment above the alcoves, we could see Mr. Roberts and a stranger. Darrow's was full of strangers and strange things today. I sighed involuntarily; and the captain said with very pleasant warmth:

"It's most kind of you to take so much trouble over me today. I expect I'll be bothering you every day while I'm here."

I gave him permission to bother me at any time; and as he walked up the aisle, Mr. Roberts and his companion came down it, and halted at my desk.

"Miss Fuller," announced Mr. Roberts, with much gravity, "this is Mr. Almy, from the detective bureau. He would like a few minutes' talk with you."

Benjamin Almy took a chair, and proceeded forthwith to business, with noticeable zest.

"I understand you were sitting here all morning, Miss Fuller, and thus saw all the customers come in and go out. Now, could you say about what time that old gentleman entered?"

"Yes; half-past nine exactly. I looked to see the time, for he was the first customer."

"Yes. Now, that young lady who gave the alarm—at what time did she come in?"

"About a quarter of ten."

"But the law student you mentioned to the policeman?"

"I saw him go into the law section opposite the medical directly after he entered—about five minutes of ten, I think."

"Those were all the customers this morning, were they?"

"All except Professor Harrington. He stopped here as he entered, and we chatted some time before he went to make his purchase."

"Very good. Now, did you see anybody else enter the shop before half-past ten?"

"No other customer. Mr. Burton, our traveler, came in a few minutes before Professor Harrington, and went directly upstairs in the elevator."

"And did you see the old gentleman again after you finally saw him being carried into the aisle?"

"Yes," said I, "three times I saw him cross the aisle and enter the law-book alcove, which is right opposite the medical alcove, you see. Then I saw him come out again at once, and beckon to Miss James to turn the light on for him, when he re-entered. I saw him finally being carried into the aisle."

"Have you any idea about what time the light was turned on for him?"

I reflected for an instant.

"The exact time I could not say; but it was very shortly before Professor Harrington left, if that fact is of any use. Almost immediately after the light went on, I remember bowing to him as he passed out at the door."

"Miss Fuller, do you think anyone besides the persons you have mentioned could have been in the shop this morning?"

"I know no other customer passed me. Of course—"

"And you remember, Almy," interrupted Mr. Roberts, "that Riggs said he was alone in the shipping office all morning."

"Why, how was that?" I demanded. "When Mr. Roberts spoke I was just going to mention that applicant for the shipping clerk's job who came in here a little after ten-thirty."

"What applicant?" cried both men.

"Why, the one who came in this front entrance by mistake. Peter Burton was here at the time, and sent him back through the shop to Mr. Riggs."

"Certainly Riggs never heard of him, or we should have, too," said Mr. Roberts.

"I might look into that now, then," observed Mr. Almy, carelessly rising. "You're sure that no one else was in the shop this morning, Miss Fuller?"

I was positive. Mr. Almy thanked me with a bow, nodded to Mr. Roberts, and strode off in the direction of the shipping office.

Turning toward Mr. Roberts, I was astonished to perceive that on that cool afternoon, with the wind rising and the steam heat doing nothing of the sort, he was vigorously wiping a moist brow.

"Tell me what you think of this insane story of Burton's," he said.

"So he told you about his romantic adventures in Richmond? Don't say he actually did something sensible!"

"He came to me with the story just before he went out this afternoon, between Mr. Darrow's hearing the news, and his conference with Almy and myself, which was scheduled to take place while you were instructing Captain Ashland."

"Some afternoon!" I observed severely, in order to show sympathy.

"How," continued Mr. Roberts, even more severely, "this story of Burton's is going to help either the girl or himself, I don't see. It was solely for her sake, on a perfectly wild impulse, that he bought the book; and she follows him here forthwith. You've heard, of course, that she's still unconscious?"

"Yes; and the old man is dead."

"Nobody has an idea who either of them is; and that girl is the only person who was in the shop this morning whose actions we have attempted to investigate without any result. There's not a clew, so far, to the mystery of the attack."

"Has Mr. Almy no theories? He looks experienced," said I.

"He has advanced none yet."

"He seemed very keen about this case," I remarked thoughtfully. "Has he any idea, I wonder, as to how the attack on the old man was made? I mean, with what sort of weapon?"

"Whatever the weapon was, it has disappeared," said Mr. Roberts, meaningly.

"Well, that shipping-office applicant did get away somehow—"

"What Almy really wants to know first, however," said Mr. Roberts, "is: What was that girl doing here all that hour and a half?"

I pondered. Having abandoned consideration of the bookplate as an object of chase, the book occurred to me again, and in stronger light.

"Between you and me, Mr. Roberts, it might seem as if she had traced that book from the Richmond auction room to this shop, through press notices of the sale. You see, she said to Peter, 'Keep it for me.' She must have meant the book."

"Must she?" Mr. Roberts shook his head. "You saw, of course, as did the other witnesses, that the young lady clutched the book-table suddenly as Burton rushed toward her?"

"Yes."

"I mentioned that the weapon used in the attack must have been very small. Therefore the police are wondering: did the young lady lay anything on that table among the books, and rely on Burton to pick it up and conceal it for her?"

"Why, What Applicant?" Cried Both Men.

"Do they know he saw her in Richmond?" I demanded uneasily.

"Not yet, at least. And he denies, of course, that he saw her put anything on the table, much less picked it up. But what did happen to that old man? Did she know him? If not, why should she have been so utterly overcome by his condition? Why did she demand Burton's help? These are the first questions to be answered."

"And you think there's no clew here?" I inquired, standing Clarihew's "Notes" on the desk. "You know there was a rival bid for it; and the girl was so frightened at the auction; and Peter did see her examining the book, and he thought—"

"I'm glad you said nothing so vague and conjectural to Mr. Almy," interrupted Mr. Roberts, sharply. "A typical wrangle between two buyers, the examination of a book put up for public auction, the effect of a pretty girl on the emotions of a headlong young fool—do you think such things would be of interest in a police investigation of a murder. Let me assure you that facts and concrete information are much more likely to be appreciated than assumptions."

"I should hope so!" I concurred sweetly. "And speaking of facts: was there really some one in the shop this morning that I don't know about?"

"There was Miss Burton's ex-suitor," replied Mr. Roberts, with such promptness that he momentarily sidetracked me.

"What!"

"He entered in the middle of the excitement, when you were attending the young lady—"

"Then he was after that book!" I cried in consternation.

"He was after the girl!"

"Not at all. I took Nancy Burton to lunch today, and she told me all about what she pleases, for some obscure reason, to term her elopement with a Mr. Brandon Tower—Peter told you something of that, too, I see. Well, Mr. Tower learned from her prattle of the purchase of this book. It seems to have had a curious interest for him: three times in the course of the said elopement he tried to get possession of it!" I gave the details, and had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Roberts sit gaping with amazement through the narrative.

Mr. Roberts departed with the law book. I hastened toward the rear of the shop for some volumes I needed. Ulysses was polishing the elevator cage.

Finally he said:

"I done tell you the truf this mornin', Miss Fuller! I knowed somp'n powerful bad was go'n' happen, and it done happen; and Mist' Case call me ole stuperstuous fool!"

"Mr. Case called you . . ." I couldn't finish the sentence, for amazement. Mr. Case, perhaps the most truly polite person on earth, and sometimes, it was to be feared, the only polite one in Darrow's, to call Ulysses names! "Well, it's true something did happen," I finally managed to admit discreetly.

"Yas'm," said Ulysses, complacently. "Does they know who that poor old gemman was yet?"

"No," I sighed.

Ulysses drew himself up to his full six feet and stood motionless, his brass-polish can in his left hand, a bunch of waste in his right. His face was expressionless. He announced in a sepulchral whisper:

"I knows!"

I was certainly startled, but confident in Ulysses' abysmal private knowledge of anything that might concern Darrow's.

"Who was he, then?" I demanded.

"Mist' Charles Grosvenor," announced Ulysses.

"How do you know?"

"I knows."

"But how, Ulysses? Please tell me!"

Looking very important, he produced from his sweater pocket a ragged newspaper clipping. At the head of the article was an excellent likeness of the very old gentleman whose identity was in question, and beneath it the caption:

NEW YORKER BORN IN MANHATTAN
Lives 70 Years in Same House
Charles Grosvenor, Eminent Retired Merchant, Reaches 3 Score and 10 at His Birthplace in Normandy Terrace.

"Mr. Grosvenor—very distinguish!" as Ernesto had observed three hours before! So, in my zeal to aid Providence, I had put Nancy in the way of snatching up that scarce article, a nice downtown flat, thus arranging that Peter should live in the same house which had been the home of the old gentleman who had—just for a fleeting moment, of course!—seemed mysteriously connected with the bookplate which that girl had certainly—But away with assumptions!

"Why didn't you say before if you knew who the old gentleman was?" I inquired severely. "He's been dead several hours now."

"Yas'm, I knows that," observed Ulysses, sulkily, "I didn't hardly see him when he's found. Mist' Riggs hustle me to watch shipping office, then Mist' Case call me ole fool!"

The reply was not exactly direct, but I knew it was all I could get. However, I ventured:

"Did you cut this clipping out because you'd seen him here in the shop?"

"I cuts out pieces 'bout folks I knows," returned Ulysses, primly.

At this point Mr. Case stepped out of his office. I ran toward him with the clipping.

"Look at this!" I cried. "Do you recognize him?"

"Good Lord!" he gasped; "it's the old gentleman! Where's Almy?"

"Right here," answered Mr. Almy, appearing in the door of the shipping office.

I firmly took the clipping away from Mr. Case, and handed it to Mr. Almy as an earnest of what he could expect from my co-operation.

"The old gentleman," I announced, "is identified."

CHAPTER V

The Yellow Note

I took the train into New York next morning not only ready, as usual with me, for whatever might befall, but much interested in anticipating it, for Darrow's had within the last twenty-four hours become more "different" than ever. I had not long to wait for a sensation. When I unfolded my newspaper, a staid but informing sheet containing, without resort to excess of ink or illustrations, all the news considered suitable for refined minds, I found the following article honored with front-page position:

"The victim of a mysterious attack made in Darrow's bookshop in Fourth avenue yesterday morning was identified as Charles Grosvenor of 14 Normandy terrace, shortly after his death yesterday at 1 p. m. in Mercy hospital.

"He died without recovering consciousness, as the result of a violent slashing of his right wrist by an unknown assailant, no trace of whom can yet be found.

Growth of Beard Not Stimulated by Razor

Whether or not shaving makes the beard grow faster is a question that never has been definitely answered to the satisfaction of all scientists. It is the general belief among medical men and physiologists that shaving itself does not make the beard grow faster and that cutting does not increase the growth of hair.

There is a definite rate of growth in the hair of normal and healthy persons and this growth is not affected by mere cutting. It is possible, however, that shaving makes the beard grow faster for a different reason, says Pathfinder Magazine. Shaving tends to irritate the skin somewhat and causes an increased flow of blood to the shaved section. Consequently there is an increase in the nourishment of the hair follicles, and this may cause the beard to grow stiffer and heavier, and perhaps faster.

It is widely believed that if a man never shaved he would not have as heavy a beard as he would have if he shaved a few years and then stopped.

Britain's "Unknown"

The inscription on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Westminster abbey, London, is: "A British warrior, maybe and rank unknown, who in the presence of the king of England, was here buried among the kings of England, representing all the British warriors who gave their lives for king and country in the Great war."

Huge Python

The longest snake of which there is authentic record was a python captured in Malaysia and shipped to the Tierpark at Hamburg, Germany. This snake died immediately after reaching port, and was stretched on the deck of the steamer and measured by Dr. Arthur Irwin, then director of the Philadelphia Zoological society. It measured a few inches over thirty feet in length and weighed close to 300 pounds. This species, the regal or reticulated python (Python reticulatus) is the largest species of serpent. It is alleged to attain a length of 35 feet.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Statesman Drew Ire of Ohio Legislature

One Ohio legislature adopted a resolution declaring a former President of the United States guilty of a treasonable act. It is true the succeeding legislature rescinded it, but it stood on the journal for two years. The Forty-second legislature was the body that adopted it and John Quincy Adams was the accused man. He was then a member of the house of representatives, representing Massachusetts in congress, and had laid before the house the petition of a constituent asking that the union of states be dissolved. The resolution adopted in Ohio declared that in aiding to give publicity and importance to the treasonable, proposition, Mr. Adams had merited censure and that the legislature of Ohio "should stamp his course and conduct in the matter with its indignant disapprobation." Soon after the next legislature met, a resolution to rescind the action was passed. The rescinding resolution declared that the censure had been based on erroneous information and was "calculated to cast undue reproach on the character of a statesman and patriot."—Detroit News.

Happy Findings

One day the tutor of a marquise de Renville, while playing tennis at Saumur, missed making his point, but found the priceless lost Second Decade of Livy when a fragment of paper was blown across his racket. Showing Latest Farming Methods

The agricultural college of the University of California, located at Davis, by sending a train equipped with demonstrations of the scientific methods of farming through the rich farming sections of the state, gives the people some idea of how the farm should be handled to give the greatest return. Scientific cookery and the proper methods of sanitation on the farm are also shown, two of the demonstrators in these matters being seen above.

VIGOROUS SOUL SAVER

John Johnson, the hard-working Shaker minister of La Push, Wash., who leads his deacons and deaconesses by ringing bells, as shown above, incessantly through the services until his little wooden church literally rocks with the sound. He also dances while ringing the bells, and really works harder than anyone else for the salvation of the souls in his keeping.

OLDEST POSTMASTER

Francis Edkin Bush, in his ninety-sixth year, postmaster of Standing Stone, Pa., claims to be the oldest active postmaster of the United States. He was first commissioned in 1875, giving him a record of 53 years. He is also the oldest merchant of Pennsylvania, opening a general store in 1863 and continuing the business since.

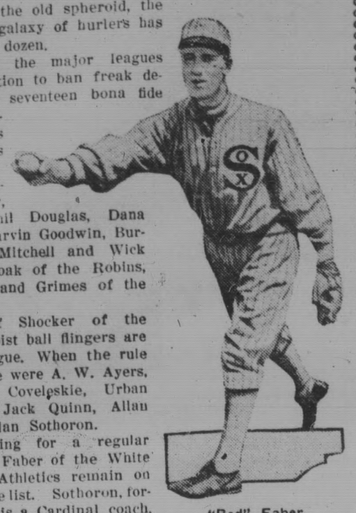
Six Moist Ball Hurlers Left

ANOTHER famous tribe—the spitball pitchers of baseball—is rapidly becoming extinct. Now that Urban Shocker has made up his mind to moisten bank notes in his St. Louis radio shop in preference to wetting the old spheroid, the ranks of this once great galaxy of hurlers has dwindled to a mere half dozen.

Only eight years ago the major leagues decided by concurrent action to ban freak deliveries and agreed that seventeen bona fide spitball pitchers then performing in the big circuits would be the only ones exempt.



"Red" Faber.

Of that number the National had eight, namely, Bill Doak, Shuffling Phil Douglas, Dana Fillingim, Ray Fisher, Marvin Goodwin, Burleigh Grimes, Clarence Mitchell and Wick Rudolph. Today only Doak of the Robins, Mitchell of the Phillies and Grimes of the Pirates survive.

With the passing of Shocker of the Yankees, three of the moist ball flingers are left in the American league. When the rule was passed in 1920, there were A. W. Ayers, Ray Caldwell, Stanley Coveleskie, Urban Faber, H. B. Leonard, Jack Quinn, Allan Russell, Shocker and Allan Sothoron.

Coveleskie, now battling for a regular berth with the Yankees, Faber of the White Sox and Quinn of the Athletics remain on the American league active list. Sothoron, formerly with the Browns, is a Cardinal coach.

The ancient Polish heaver, Coveleskie, turned in two good performances during the southern training grind and seems assured of some sort of a contract with the world champions.

Jack Quinn, the Methusaleh of baseball, is entering his twenty-fifth year on the diamond. Now forty-three years old, Quinn began tossing his puzzling spitter with the old Yankees. It is an odd twist of fate that Quinn in his early major league days had his poorest luck against Connie Mack's Athletics of whom he is at present a member.

Faber, Mitchell, Doak and Grimes sem to be ready for at least another season, but 1929 may bring further reductions in the fast-thinning line of these moundsmen who acquired their skill in the bygone days when chewing tobacco was considered an art in itself.

Yearns for Olympics

The photo shows Miss Jean Shiley, sixteen-year-old Haverford high school girl, as she cleared a good height on the high jump standard during her training for the Olympic tryouts to be held in New York. According to Lawson Robertson, head Olympic team coach, who is coaching Miss Shiley, she has already jumped 5 feet 1 inch. The present woman's high jump record is 4 feet 11 inches. Robertson has high hopes of Miss Shiley winning her event in the Olympic tryouts and in the Olympics.

HUGHIE'S CATCH WON BALL GAME

Jennings Put Up Brilliant Game With Baltimore.

Hugh A. Jennings was the shortstop for that famous aggregation known as the Orioles of Baltimore back in the '90s. When he joined the club it wasn't so famous, for the team and second division were synonymous.

From 1892 until 1899, Jennings created a record in the shortstop position that lives in baseball history as one of the greatest. A brilliant, scrappy player he was the personification of all that goes to make a ball player great.

It was Bill Dahlen against Hughie Jennings. Which was the greatest? It was a tossup but the palm would drift toward Hughie for the red-head was a bona fide .300 hitter and his style of play was slightly more sensational. This story will describe Hughie Jennings in his manner of play for, possibly, this was his most brilliant stunt in fielding.

It was growing dark and the Orioles were making life miserable for Umpire Tim Keefe but he refused to call the game as he considered it light enough to finish the contest.

The game meant the winning or losing of a pennant. In the tight race of 1895, the Cleveland and Baltimore clubs were locked in a terrific struggle for first place—only half a game separating them in the last few days of the race.

In this game the Orioles had the Giants as their opponents and the feeling existing between these teams wasn't the sweetest or most kindly.

In the eighth inning the Orioles had the lead, 5 to 2, and that was the reason they wanted the umpire to call the game. In that round Mike Tiernan, the first batter up, drove out a hit good for two bases. Van Haltren received a pass and with George Davis up it looked like a Tarai finish for the Giants but Davis failed to deliver.

Borten, a new man in the league, stepped to the plate for the second time in his big league experience. Bill Hoffer was doing the hurling for the Birds and he looked anxious for he didn't know anything about the newcomer, also the outfielders didn't know where to play for him. Borten smashed the first ball pitched and it looked good for two or more bases. A mighty shout arose from thousands of the Manhattan fans.

A red-headed played leaped into the air with seemingly not the slightest chance of ever touching the flying sphere. The cheering was turned into groans as Shortstop Jennings speared that ball, then tore in and touched second, completing a double play. He could have made a triple, lone handed, if it had been necessary, for all runners had scampered toward home.

For a few seconds silence came over the throng, for they were amazed and dazed by the suddenness and brilliancy of the play. Then the happy Orioles danced with joy. Hughie Jennings was the hero. The catch was recorded at the time as the greatest ever made by a shortstop.

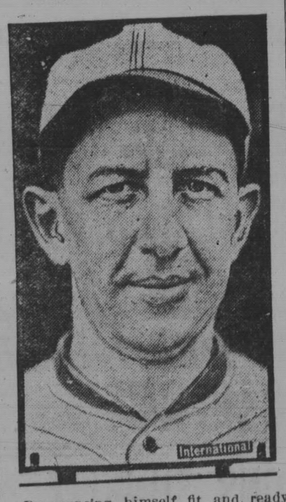
Roland Locke Employed by New York Law Firm

Roland Locke, who clipped Charles Paddock's 220-yard dash record nearly one-half second in the spring of 1926, is going to New York, where he will be employed by a law firm and where he plans to undergo an extensive training program.

Locke's law course studies at the University of Nebraska last year curtailed his cinder track work, but he did go to the Penn relays, where he won the 220-yard dash from Jackson Scholz and Henry Russell. He has done but little running since.

In New York Locke will devote his leisure hours to training and to competition on the indoor boardways. At the opening of the out-door season he will begin preparation for the Olympic games, he said.

Eddie Collins Ready



Pronouncing himself fit and ready to play ball, Eddie Collins, captain of the Philadelphia Athletics and one time super-second baseman, expressed the wish that he might run his total American League game to 3,000 before he quits the diamond. Collins is nearing his forty-first birthday and has played in 2,778 league games. He hopes to surpass Ty Cobb's mark of 2,938 before he retires.

Use Portable Track

Through the instrumentality of the Ontario branch of the Amateur Athletic union of Canada a portable board track with banked ends will be installed in the Coliseum in Toronto. The building, located in Exhibition park, has been placed in care of a committee of alderman, who will work in conjunction with the parks commission of that city. Indoor track meets with modern equipment will hereafter be enjoyed by the athletes there.

New Dresses for The School Girl

By MAE MARTIN

Thousands of mothers with daughters of high school or college age, have problems like this Little Rock, Arkansas, mother. She says: "I don't believe I could have put my daughter through the last two years of high school and college without the help of Diamond Dyes. Dresses long out of style and faded were made new with a package or so of Diamond Dyes and the addition of a few dozen buttons and a little braid. Sometimes two dresses were combined and brought up to date in lines that gave no hint of their past. People never knew they were redyed when I used Diamond Dyes. They never take the life out of cloth or make it limp. They always make things fresh, crisp and bright."

Diamond Dyes are true dyes, like those used when the cloth was made. Tinting with them is as easy as bluing, and dyeing only takes a little more time. Insist on Diamond Dyes and save disappointment. They never streak, spot or run.

My handsome new book, "Color Craft," will help you with your clothes and home furnishing problems. Sixty-four pages of dollar-saving suggestions, fully illustrated in colors. It's FREE. Simply write Mae Martin, Home Service Dept., Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Best Fish Story

Probably the year's best fish story comes from an Oklahoma correspondent of the Farm Journal. On a recent fishing trip with two companions, he relates, his attention was distracted from his line for a moment. Suddenly one of his fellows called his attention to a powerful pull at the line and he tugged away enthusiastically—only to find that an old rubber boot had been hitched to his hook by his playful friends.

To complete the joke, he dragged the boot ashore with mock seriousness and so turned the laugh on the practical jokers when an 18-inch bass leaped out.

Pear Tree Has History

A pear tree at Bristol, Conn., is now one hundred seventy-five years old and has been owned by six generations of one family. The tree, now in the possession of Edward Pierce, was originally planted in 1752 by Josiah Lewis, an ancestor, and has borne fruit every year. Family tradition says that Josiah Lewis came to Bristol from Southington by horseback, bringing the pear tree with him. At the time of his daughter's marriage to a settler, Mr. Lewis presented her the pear tree, which was planted in the rear of the bridal home.

Case Where Deafness Proved an Advantage

A New York store was having great difficulty in getting girls for their cash department, where automatic carriers come from the counters. Girls were hired, but they would not stay.

The head of the department became so discouraged that, as a last resort, he suggested to his superior to try hard-of-hearing girls. They told him, "You are crazy," but they let him try the plan. The deafened girls were hired.

It was found that the constant noise of the carriers rattling along through the tubes did not jar on the deafened girls in the least, and so they were seldom disturbed in their counting and making correct change. The deafened girls could win out where the hearing girls were a failure.—New York Evening World.

WOODSIDE

This is the time of year for pic nics and our tree-covered hills seem a popular place for staging them. A number of picnic, school and fraternal, will be held in this vicinity during the month of May. First upon the roll is the annual affair given by Neuman Brothers to their employees with their families. This will be held on May 6th at the old Davis ranch over the top of the ridge. This is always a popular picnic and much enjoyed by those who are fortunate enough to secure invitations.

The Redwood City Woman's Club will hold its annual picnic at the Tripp redwood grove at the foot of Kings Mountain on May 10th. This has been the club's meeting place for several years.

He was the outstanding player on his team last year and much was exected from his direction of the team as captain for te coming season.
